Dear Eye Care Practitioner,

Now that CooperVision's purchase of Sauflon Pharmaceuticals, Limited is officially complete, the work of combining both companies is swiftly underway. This is a union that both executive teams are excited about and fully support. And the move further solidifies CooperVision's commitment to customer-centered innovation, very much in keeping with our history of providing real advantages for our customers and your wearers.

One team, one commitment to you.

Over the course of our integration efforts, we've found many synergies and shared values between Sauflon and CooperVision. Like us, they offer a strong lens portfolio, they're passionate about technology and they put customers first. And now as one team, we are committed to ensuring you receive all the information you need, the products your patients require and the industry leading support to drive your business forward.

Everyone, everyday.

Meeting the needs of your patients and accelerating the growth of your business has never been easier. CooperVision is proud to make the most comprehensive daily disposable lens portfolio available to you. Now, you can offer a daily disposable lens for every wearer and every budget, using innovative silicone hydrogel technology. As always, we will help you take advantage of new opportunities with innovation, service and support everyday.

We look forward to talking with you about our entire family of daily disposable lenses and how we can help you accelerate the patient shift to this business-building modality.

What's next?

We are working quickly and effectively to combine both companies' entrepreneurial and passionate teams to build an even stronger partnership for you. And for the near term, it's business as usual for both companies. Please continue to contact your CooperVision representative for all CooperVision business and your Sauflon representative for all Sauflon business. We are committed to keeping you informed as we move forward and so updates will be shared via email, phone and on our professional website here. Our goal is to make the transition as seamless as possible for you.

Thank you again for your continued confidence in CooperVision. We look forward to growing our partnership through ongoing customer-centered innovation and industry leading business building services.

Best regards,

Ron Domingo
